

ACT REPORT

Dogs, popularly known as “man’s best friend” have been rated by the WeRateDogs community on twitter. Based on our analysis below, let’s see what the WeRateDogs community and the twitter community have to say about the different dog breeds as well as the different stages of a dog.

In the analysis below, we will be answering the following questions:

1. What are the most popular dog breeds based on the ratings, likes and retweets?
2. Does the number of images provided correlate with the predicted confidence score?
3. What dog stages have the highest ratings, likes and retweets?
4. Most owned breed based on number of breeds available in the dataset

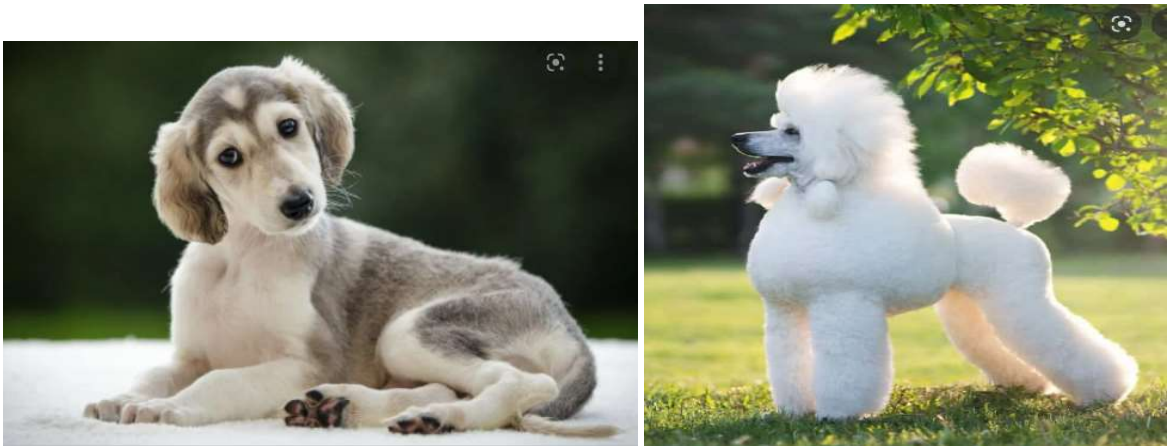

1. Based on the average ratings for each breed given by WeRateDogs, the clumber has Received the highest score.

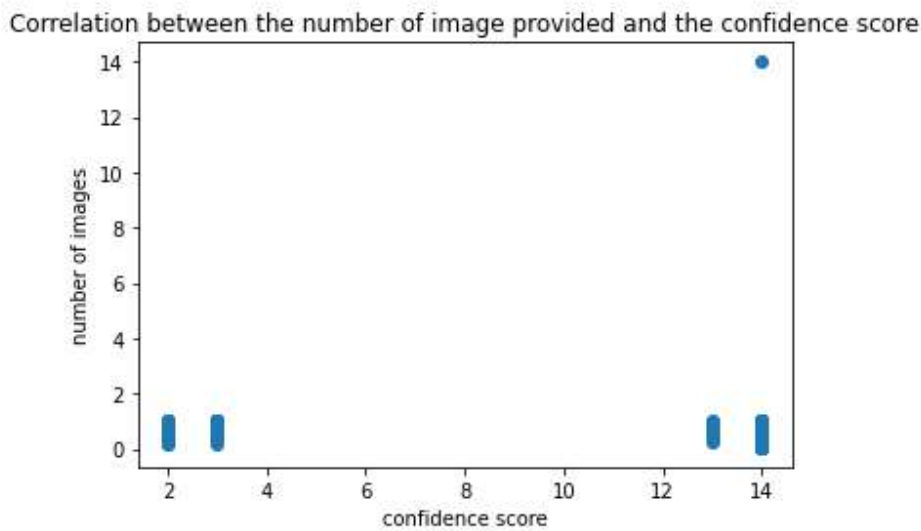

Here’s a cute picture of a clumber, and I must say, it's quite a cute one!

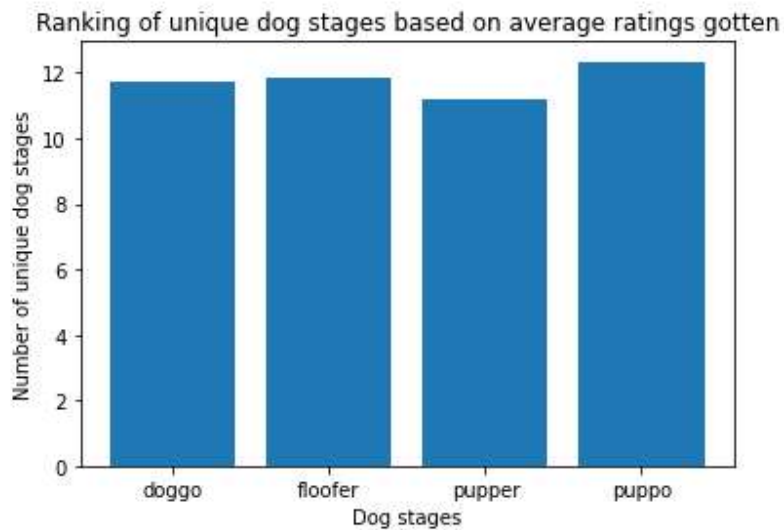

For most favorite and most retweeted, we have the saluki and standard poodle respectively.

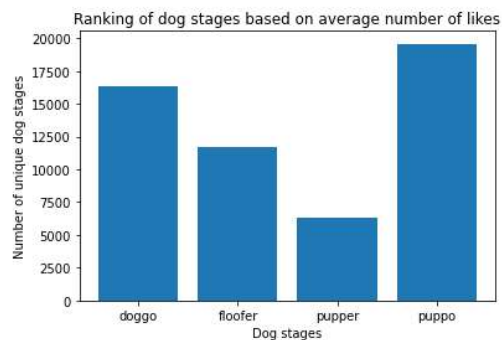

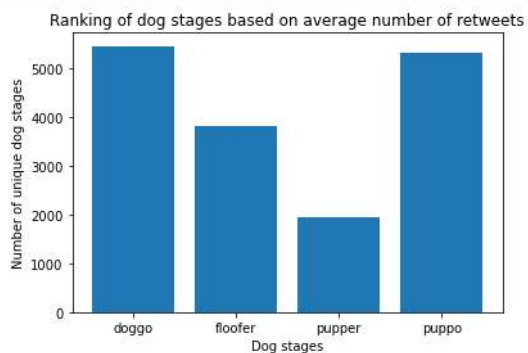

2. It was observed that the number of images provided in the tweet did not correlate to the confidence score of the prediction. We observed that tweets with up to 14 images still had low confidence scores.

3. From our analysis, WeRateDogs were not so biased with rating dogs based on their ages.

As for likes and retweets, the images having puppos and doggos had a higher retweet and favorite counts as seen below:

4. Finally, we saw that the most common dog breed in the dataset provided happened to be a golden retriever which is understandable as they have won the hearts of many dog lovers with their higher intellect and bonding skills!
